Soak at Blackstone Hotsprings

Open for private soaking
9am-9pm every day.

Give us a call to book
your next soak!

Our hotspring water comes from the ground at a perfect temperature for therapeutic baths and healing soaks. Each private outdoor bath features unique benches, ledges and steps for different levels of submersion and total relaxation. Choose one of our 3 outdoor tubs - nicely shaded, with open air so you can see the sky and the stars.

R.W. Winkler: A Tribute

R.W. Winkler developed his innovative and unique style over many years of pursuing art. He began by taking sculpture commissions and as photographer for SunDiamond in California.

It was when he retired, however, that he was able to focus exclusively on his art, as a sculptor and gallery owner.

Much of Winkler's art is socio-politically themed. The bulk of his work harkened back to his ranch upbringing and rodeo time, although he later branched out into wider social issues.

For example: Pedigreed, his mustang sculpture, is broken into shapes representing how the animal is sectioned for dog food.

He also enjoyed making sculptures of local Hillsboro people he was fond of. For example: Chet's Run (miner) and Jack Ormond (cowboy).

A creative and original artist, Winkler's sculpture is destined to live on.

Gauguin on My Mind

Longhorn

February, 2021 was marked by the passing of one of the giants of New Mexico art: R.W. Winkler of Hillsboro, known simply as Winkler. About the time I was being born, Winkler was in the rodeo riding broncs. While I was growing up he had become a sculptor. When our trails finally crossed he was about as old as I am now. He was man among men, the kind they say we don't make anymore. We never did. They make themselves. He was a gentleman, graceful and determined. A builder and shaper of lives. The greatest thing about this job is to know people like him - and his family - The Winklers. I've written of them before in these pages and of how much I love them. I don't know them well, but I love them. The great spirit of art is just imbued within them. It pours out of them, like something they cannot help, only something that they must do. Along with himself were his wife Nolan, his sons, Mark and Todd and Todd's wife Anne - extraordinary artists all, working with vision and above all wit. I rate Todd among New Mexico's finest artists. And Winkler was much larger than all of that. He was that rarest of truisms - he was larger than life. He will be missed. He is missed. Yet he resides within all of us forever.

SIERRA COUNTY ARTISTS DIRECTORY

Congratulations and a big Thank You to all the advertisers and sponsors of the Sierra County Artists Directory throughout its first 20 years!

20th
Anniversary Issue

First published in 2003, the Directory was the brain child of Lois V. Smith. Lois, a local artist, had a vision of a catalog featuring the county's artists, arts locations, performance artists and authors. The Hot Springs spas and the healing artists were included to highlight Truth or Consequences' centuries-long tradition as a healing center. The Directory has grown under the leadership of Rebecca Speakes, the project director and graphic designer. It has increased from 32 pages to 116 pages, expanding with the local arts community. The Directory is distributed throughout Sierra County and New Mexico.

The Artists Directory is an annual publication, coming out at the end of April just before the Ralph Edwards Fiesta Days. The Directory has become the county's premier publication, and has served as a model for other Arts Councils' art catalogs. Many people have made Sierra County a destination for vacations, as well as residences and businesses based on the image the Artists Directory presents to those seeking an area rich in the Arts. Its featured contents promotes the Arts in its many forms in Sierra County. The Artists Directory continues to be an all-volunteer project.

The Art Beneath Your Feet: Geology of Truth or Consequences, NM

by Bruce Cox

SE Corner NMBGMR Geologic Map 271

Take a deep breath and imagine the following sequence of geologic time. It is 1.4 billion years before present and you are standing in a place that has no living thing—only rock, a thin dark atmosphere, maybe a volcano or two nearby. Ever so slowly (during the next 900 million years), this same place becomes an ocean margin with offshore reefs and onshore mudflats, both teeming with animal life. The eons continue to roll on and your place transforms into a semi-tropical forest inhabited by gigantic reptiles—the dinosaurs. Then, out of the blue sky, an asteroid hits your planet, the sky grows dark and cold, and most of that abundant life on land and sea becomes extinct—one evolutionary cycle ends. Then a new cycle begins, the planet warms, the skies clear and new life emerges here. Horses and camels graze a broad prairie, then elephants, foxes, all sorts of birds and finally people arrive, our ancestors. This is the 1.4 billion year old geologic story of the Calcite crystals lining a cavern wall. Northern Caballo Mountains place where you are standing. That place is Truth or Consequences, New Mexico, and the story is written in the rocks beneath your feet.

Geologic maps, if drawn with care and attention, can represent the maker's sense of science and art. The mapping process involves countless hours of walking the ground, describing the rock, taking measurements and samples, and transferring all that information to paper. The geologic map of Truth or Consequences is an evolving work of art and science. Map colors represent various types of rock present at the ground surface. The color palette has been standardized to represent intervals of geologic time ranging from brown (early Precambrian, 1.4 billion years ago) to yellow (Quaternary, 2.6 million years ago) to present). Blue colors identify rocks that were formed in the earth's early oceans when life began to flourish. Fossils of these animals (now extinct) can be found in the "blue" limestone rock in and near T or C.

Many geologic features and processes combine to drive the ancient, healing hot spring waters of T or C. The Hot Springs' geologic story is revealed by more detailed geologic mapping, and deserves special attention. Look for that story in next year's Artists Directory.
